Division of Patient Safety and Quality

Telligen, the Illinois Quality Improvement Organization

Illinois APIC Chapters

Registration limited to the first 150 registrants for each workshop

Purpose

To share lessons learned from the Illinois Clostridium difficile Prevention Collaborative and provide health professionals with a skills-building program and networking platform that will enhance their ability to implement evidence-based strategies to prevent Clostridium difficile infections (CDI)

Target Audience

Long term care facilities – infection prevention personnel, lab and quality directors, nursing leadership and care providers, environmental services personnel, administrators

Acute care and long term acute care hospitals – Infection prevention personnel, lab and quality directors, nursing leadership and care providers, environmental services personnel

Other groups – Health professional associations and public health professionals who work to reduce healthcare associated infections in Illinois.

Objectives

By attending this workshop, participants will be able to:

- Summarize the impact of Clostridium difficile statewide and nationally and discuss practical facility-specific interventions to prevent CDI.
- Demonstrate proper cleaning techniques for environmental surfaces and discuss how to implement an environmental cleaning monitoring program
- Discuss how laboratory personnel, Infection Control Professionals, and nursing staff can improve communication and collaboration to prevent the transmission of CDI
- Identify critical information that needs to be exchanged between a hospital and long term care facility for safe transfer of a patient with CDI.
- Relate regulations, policies, and best practices for implementation of C. diff infection prevention measures in the long term care setting
